2000 Session of the Indiana General Assembly

Legislature allocates tobacco settlement funds

Bi-partisan agreement to help several programs and groups

Certainly an important achievement of the 2000 legislative session was passage of legislation that sets up a system to allocate more than $4 billion Indiana will be receiving from the national tobacco settlement over the next 25 years. The funds will be used for health care services, tobacco prevention programs and assistance for senior citizens on lower incomes who have trouble purchasing prescription drugs.

The final bill was the result of many months of work by legislators on both sides of the aisle. From the start, we have attempted to assure that most of the funding goes to health care and efforts to reduce the use of tobacco products.

In the first year alone, $35 million will be dedicated toward health care programs, with an emphasis on tobacco education and prevention. Another $20 million will be used to help seniors on low incomes purchase needed prescription drugs. Community health centers will receive $15 million in program support, along with a one-time-only appropriation of $10 million to make physical improvements to facilities.

This is a considerable accomplishment for a short session of the Legislature, and it is a tribute to the willingness of officials to set aside partisan differences in order to pass bills that will have long-term benefits for the people of our state.

Rep. Porter discusses legislation with Rep. Jeb Bardon.

Senior citizens will also see benefits of tobacco settlement

Senior citizens on lower incomes should not have to choose between buying food to eat or the prescription drugs they need to remain healthy. Thanks to the legislation allocating money from the national tobacco settlement, they won't have to make that decision.

The final bill includes $20 million to help low income seniors purchase prescription drugs. From my visits around the district, this is one of the most pressing concerns among older Hoosiers.

New law will establish IHSAA review panel

The General Assembly addressed parent concerns about the Indiana High School Athletic Association through legislation that creates a panel to review appeals of rulings made by the IHSAA.

The panel will consist of parents, high school principals and athletic directors. Issues that they will rule on include the eligibility of student athletes. In the past, appeals of IHSAA decisions often led to lengthy, expensive court fights. Now, the panel will address appeals and save students and parents time and money.

Session News

Bias Crimes -- I authored legislation enabling law enforcement officials to track bias crimes in Indiana. Officials would be required to report the collected data to the Indiana Central Repository for Criminal History.

The legislation defines a bias crime as a crime that a person commits based on another person's race, creed, national origin, religion, sexual orientation or disability.

The purpose of this legislation is to use the collected data to assess whether or not a bias crime problem exists in Indiana. Many other states already report bias crimes and use the data for assessment purposes.

School Safety -- Several bills passed this session deal with school safety. School buses will be required to display the school or school district and its corresponding number on the back and top of the vehicles. This new requirement will make it easier to identify school buses and students in an emergency. In the case of an overturned school bus, officials will be able to identify the bus and find out where it is from in order to notify parents and locate medical information on students.

National concern about school safety played a role in passage of legislation that allows school security plans to remain confidential. The legislation also provides that school boards may meet in private to discuss the assessment, design and implementation of school safety and security measures.

We also enacted legislation that stiffens the penalties for speeding violations near school to a Class B infraction. The maximum penalty for this offense is $1,000.

Environment -- Reports of a massive fish kill in the White River in central Indiana led legislators to join with Gov. Frank O'Bannon in passing several new environmental protection initiatives. One bill will require the Indiana Department of Environmental Management (IDEM) to compile a report on restoration of the river and evaluate procedures to speed up reaction time in the event of future hazardous spills. We also will improve notification procedures to protect people living in contaminated areas, and double the fines charged to polluters.

Helping working men and women

New legislation addresses disability, unemployment

Legislators have approved measures that will make substantial changes in coverage for workers who are injured on the job and improve benefits for those people who have lost their jobs.

Around 90 percent of Indiana workers who receive a disabling injury in a workplace accident will see their compensation increase close to 50 percent. There are improvements in the one-time cash payments made to a person who suffers a permanent partial impairment in a workplace accident. The change will help any worker determined to have up to the 30th degree of impairment, which includes around 90 percent of all injured employees. Weekly disability payments also will increase.

Indiana workers who lose their jobs will see unemployment compensation increase by 33 percent over the next three years. The maximum benefit will increase from $252 to $336 by July 2002. To finance the increase, the state will use a larger share of the unemployment trust fund, a move that will cut premium payments by employers by nearly $80 million the next two years.

State legislative web site offers variety of information

The state web site provides a great deal of information about state government, the legislative process and other related items. The main site at www.state.in.us offers a nice starting point to explore government in Indiana.

From that starting point, you can visit the home pages of elected state officials and state agencies. In addition, several premium services are available for a monthly fee.

I encourage you to visit my web site at www.state.in.us/R96 and explore various items related to the legislature.

A new feature on my web site will allow you to request various House publications. We currently offer publications specifically designed for senior citizens, grade-school children, and high school students in the process of choosing a college. Other publications give a general overview of various Indiana state agencies, offer a guide to women’s health and advise how to avoid being the victim of a scam. There is also a booklet available which details every bill that became law during this year’s legislative session.

E-mail updates available on state legislative issues

Several people have indicated to me that they would like to receive e-mail updates on legislative issues and other issues important to our district. I am pleased to offer this service through my legislative office.

Simply e-mail or call my office and I will add you to this list. I am excited about the technological advances over the past few years that allow you nearly instant access to legislative news and information.

Census 2000. . . why should you fill out the form?

Census 2000 in the State of Indiana means that millions of dollars in federal funding and a congressional seat are at stake. Indiana's population is estimated to be around 6 million -- up from 5.5 million in 1990 (the last official U.S. Bureau of Census count).

You may have already received your federal questionnaire in the mail. The results will be used to determine things like federal highway money and whether or not Indiana will retain all ten of its U.S. House of Representatives districts.

There will be two forms. Nationwide, five out of six households will receive the short form which will ask questions about your name, sex, age, relationship to others in your household, Hispanic origin, race and whether your home is owned or rented. It will take approximately ten minutes to finish the form. A longer form will be mailed to the remaining households, asking questions about education, ancestry, employment, disability and others. This form will take approximately 38 minutes to finish.

To make sure everyone is included, census workers will distribute forms to people who live in group settings, such as universities and colleges, nursing homes, transitional shelters, correctional institutions, and halfway houses.

Forms will be available in English, Spanish, Chinese, Tagalog, Vietnamese and Korean. Guides to answering the form will be available in many other languages.

The Census Bureau cannot share your information with others according to the law. This includes Immigration and Naturalization Services, welfare services, Internal Revenue Service, police, courts and the military.

Census facts and figures

- Census officials estimate that they missed more than 8.8 million people in 1990, mostly children, minorities and the poor .That figure includes 12.2 percent of the American Indians living on reservations.
- The federal government plans to spend $170 million on an advertising campaign to inform and educate people about the census.
- Several government mobile offices will visit more than 400 cities across the country with a traveling exhibit to educate and erase any concerns or fears about participating in the census.
- Four in 10 households did not return the census forms sent by the government in 1990.
- According to the U.S. Bureau of the Census, there is
 - one birth every 8 seconds
 - one death every 13 seconds
 - one international migrant (net) every 45 seconds
 - one federal U.S. citizen returning every 4,860 seconds
 - for a net gain of one person every 16 seconds.
